Croatia

Croatia extends from the Alps to the famous Danube, and its visible history reaches as far back in time as the Roman Empire. The most well-known areas of the country are Dubrovnik, the Adriatic resorts of Split and the island of Hvar, and the capital, Zagreb.

Known as the Pearl of the Adriatic, the seaport city of Dubrovnik has long been one of the premier destinations in the Mediterranean. During the Middle Ages it rivaled Venice in terms of commerce, culture and all-around beauty. Apart from many miles of gorgeous coastline, the Dubrovnik Highlands are also a favorite place to visit, where mountains and pine forests serve as the setting for great hiking, fishing and winter sports.

Zagreb, Croatia's capital, is a 900-year-old city of cobblestone streets that resembles Vienna, Prague and other great Central European cities. A must-see in Zagreb is Kaptol, the medieval complex of churches, palaces and museums that provide a glimpse of Croatian history. The city offers a great selection of restaurants, shopping and recreation.
